

COMP Cams® Achieves ISO 9001:2008 Certification

Memphis, TN – Quality Systems Registrars, Inc. has granted COMP Cams® ISO 9001:2008 Certification for the design, manufacture and distribution of engine valve train components.

The certification from Quality Systems Registrars, Inc. verifies that COMP Cams® has effectively applied the ISO 9001:2008 standard to the design, manufacture, distribution and technical support of valve train components. For COMP Cams® customers, the certification represents the high level of commitment that COMP® has made to continued improvement in all areas of the company, from product quality to customer service, and the framework used to reach new levels of success. Since its beginnings, COMP Cams® has always invested heavily in not just the technological resources needed to be an industry leader, but also in the support systems and customer education resources needed to back up such a robust product line. Now, the company is even better positioned to continue working toward its commitment to excellence.

COMP Cams® Product Manager, Matt Patrick, comments, “Whether it’s grinding a better camshaft, developing new engineering processes or simply finding better ways to educate our customers, COMP Cams® has always strived to be an industry leader in the quality of our products and services. We’re very proud to be granted this certification because it represents our strong focus on continually working to improve every aspect of what we do.”
